A Beautiful Life: Dr Catherine Hamlin

Mark Powell

In all the media turmoil surrounding COVID-19, you may have missed the passing of Dr Catherine Hamlin, aged ninety-six.

Dr Hamlin's gynaecological work in treating Ethiopian women suffering from obstetric fistula was so remarkable that even The Sydney Morning Herald referred to her as "the saint of Addis Ababa".

Julie White, Chair of Catherine Hamlin Fistula Foundation said:

Catherine has lived an incredible life having made an enormous difference to the lives and health of thousands upon thousands of women in Ethiopia. Her passionate commitment to women and maternal health through her trust and belief in fulfilling

*... helping over 60,000
women whom the world would rather forget.*

God's work with love and devotion to others is something that we are all in awe of.

What causes a medical professional – and her late husband Reg – to devote their lives in helping over 60,000 women whom the world would rather forget? Well, as the SMH acknowledges, it was quite simply her Christian faith.

According to Dr Robert Tong AM, the Chair of Hamlin Fistula Australia:

Dr Catherine Hamlin's dedication of her medical skills to the relief of the suffering of those least able to help themselves and her firm quiet confidence in God's overarching blessing and provision is seen in the establishment of the Addis Abba Fistula Hospital. Truly an outstanding example of Christian compassion in action.

Dr Hamlin was a devout evangelical Anglican originally associated with the Sydney Diocese. And according to Russell Powell, the media advisor for the Sydney Anglicans:

The couple took as their inspiration a scripture verse from the Gospel of Matthew, chapter 25 verse 40: "whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers of Mine, you did for Me". The verse is below Dr Reg Hamlin's photo which hangs in the hospital.

Powell goes on to record how in her bestselling autobiography, The Hospital by the River: a story of hope (Monarch Books, 2004) Hamlin reconciled the question of suffering with the existence of God. She wrote:

I have sometimes been asked if these tragic cases ever test my faith. I can truly say that, if anything, my faith has been strengthened and my soul more firmly anchored to Jesus as the only one to whom we can turn. Jesus never promised us a smooth or trouble-free passage through life. He did promise to be with us to share the sorrow and the pain...

The joy I receive from working for these patients is something for which I thank God every day. This has been my experience and I know this is what Reg felt too. I am sure that Reg and I were led here. At the time, I did not know it, but in the end, this is the place where we were meant to be. It hasn't really affected my faith. In fact, if anything, it has strengthened my faith to know that we are doing something that is in His will and the wonderful thing is that it is so enjoyable.

Dr Hamlin's words and her life example are a timely inspiration to us all: that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive.

As the world faces a period of severe trial involving COVID-19, Dr Hamlin's words and her life example are a timely inspiration to us all: that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive. And that in the midst of suffering there is faith, hope, and love.

All of which is to say, Dr Catherine Hamlin is a wonderful model of what it means to faithfully serve Christ (Matthew 25:23). And while we grieve and mourn her passing we know that even this is precious in the sight of the LORD (Psalm 116:15).
